

A century ago, the Klondike region of the Yukon Territory in northwest Canada experienced a gold rush that lasted about four years.

Eager prospectors swarmed into the area. A few got rich, but many more suffered from the harsh conditions and returned home without having made their fortune.

No one got rich - at least not in the traditional sense - although many earned handfuls of "gold" nuggets and a few victorious teams carried home golden trophies.

And everyone left with a treasured memory or two.
